The aim of this paper is to review the evidence on the relationship between carbon capture and storage (CCS) and low-carbon energy production as required by the Climate Change Act 2008 in the UK. A review of the literature was conducted using the search terms 'CCS', 'energy' and 'emissions'. The key search terms 'CCS' and 'emissions' were met with 389 and 287 articles, respectively. These were hand-searched for relevance and a total of 95 articles were identified as relevant to the objectives of this paper. Many of these articles address a relationship between CCS and renewable energy production. There is also a smaller group of studies which examine the role of CCS in

Obama mulls fix for broken security systems WASHINGTON — President Obama on Tuesday ordered his administration to consider slowing the timeline for agencies to upload new security protocols to the nation's commercial and public computer networks — a move aimed at keeping systems secure while the United States beefs up its defenses in the wake of the massive electronic break-ins. Obama said the proposal is one of several he is discussing with his cyber-security advisers as well as with leaders of the private sector as they tackle the increasing risk of attacks on national networks. "This is not a small thing," Obama said during a White House press conference. "Not only are we going to have to slow this down, but we are going to have to find a way, a consensus way, of getting around that." The president said he wants the administration to come up with "a responsible timeline" to put in place the new rules. Obama said he wants agencies, working with businesses, to get it done "in the next several months." The president spoke as online attacks targeted major corporations, including JPMorgan Chase & Co. and Target Corp., while government systems were targeted by Russian hackers. Information Security Directorate of the National Security Council Center for Cyber & Homeland Security, has proposed eliminating one of the typical 90-day approval cycles for the tougher security guidelines, which is required every year by the Homeland Security Department for all federal agencies. The new rule is targeted at large companies that use major government networks to conduct business. "The reality is, in the private sector, there's a lot of connection between the private sector and the government, and those connections are increasing," said John Holdren, director of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. "So we have to figure out how we can get around this, and it is not as simple as just saying, 'Okay, they do it. We are not going to do it.' We have to figure out how to do it." During the press conference, Obama said the government's response to the cyber-attacks has not been effective. He argued f678ea9f9e
